COMBAT AIRLIFTER

“Vincit qui primum gerit”

440 AW AIRCRAFT
Maintenance Squadron

COMMANDER'S COMMENTS

It has been another busy summer with much going on in the Air Force, Air Force Reserve Command, and 440th Airlift Wing. As I write this, 11 of our fellow Airmen are deployed, over 50 Airmen from the Logistics Readiness Squadron are finishing up their annual tour, approximately 50 Airmen are on seasoning tours and more than 30 of our Security Forces Airmen are preparing to deploy. This is all in addition to our normal weekly flying schedule of 12-15 missions, our daily maintenance support for ten C-130H aircraft, as well as combat arms training, airfield operations, tower, weather, civilian personnel, communications, and Sexual Assault Prevention and Response support for all Pope Field Airmen. As I like to say, we are not a “sleepy little Air Force Reserve wing.” In fact, we are arguably one of the busiest and most diverse C-130 wings in AFRC. Of course, you already know this, so why am I telling you?

I mention all of this to simply say thank you. Thank you for your service and commitment to the Air Force and the 440th. We frequently talk about balancing the Reserve triad of family, civilian employment, and the Air Force Reserve. It takes commitment and sacrifice to juggle these three responsibilities, and the sacrifice is not just on your part. Your family and civilian employer also make sacrifices in support of your service. While your wing leadership team and I thank you for that sacrifice, we would also like to thank your family and civilian employers for their support. To that end, we have scheduled two important events over the next few months to show our appreciation to spouses and employers.

During the September drill weekend, we will be hosting the Air Force Ball on Saturday, Sept. 20 and we have scheduled a spouse orientation flight on Sunday, Sept. 21. Whether or not your spouse wants to fly with us, I encourage you to bring them out to the September drill weekend. Take them to the Air Force Ball, sign them up to fly with us, or just give them the opportunity to meet your fellow Airmen and show them what you do in the 440th.

On Saturday, Nov. 15, the Human Resources Development Council is sponsoring a Career and Diversity Day and in conjunction, we will be hosting an Employer Appreciation Day. This is an opportunity for you to say “thank you” to your employer and show them what you do. It also provides your employer a chance to meet your commanders, chiefs, and first sergeants to gain a better understanding of our mission and the critical role you play in it. Finally, it allows Chief Hart and me the opportunity to personally thank each and every one of them and answer any concerns they have regarding the demands of your Air Force Reserve service.

Brig. Gen. James P. Scanlan
440 AW Wing Commander

I encourage all of you to take full advantage of these opportunities. Take the time to show your appreciation for all of the great support provided by your family and your employer, and give us an opportunity to thank them as well. They play an important part in our Nation's defense and we need to show them our appreciation.

Thanks for all you do.

With great respect,
Brig. Gen. Jim Scanlan

YELLOW RIBBON PROGRAM

The Yellow Ribbon (YR) Program promotes the well-being of reservists and their families by connecting them with resources before and after deployments. It began in 2008 following a congressional mandate for the Department of Defense to assist reservists and National Guard members in maintaining resiliency as they transition between their military and civilian roles. Each year, the Air Force Reserve program trains 7,000 reservists and family members in education benefits, health care, retirement information and more.

The next YR events will be held:
22-24 Aug in Daytona Beach, FL
26-28 Sept in Orlando, FL

Can't attend an event but would love some resources? Check out this link:

<http://www.cnn.com/interactive/2014/03/us/uncounted-suicides/>

The story and CNN video series "The Uncounted" visits the question of : what is war's true toll? At the urging of military family groups, a report was given to Congress on what it would take to track suicides of military service family members. "The Uncounted" is a story that dives deeply into this issue and provides an intimate portrait of what these families have gone through. The story is told through the eyes of a sibling, a spouse, parents and a teenager.

For more info on YR resources or eligibility please contact your YR rep: Capt Joya Gamara at yellow.ribbon.pope@us.af.mil or DSN 424-2388.

Senior Airman Antonio Frost, a 440th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron nondestructive inspection apprentice, demagnetizes nose landing gear wheel bolts after magnetic particle inspection at Pope Field, N.C., on July 24, 2014. Magnetic particle inspection is a nondestructive inspection technique for detecting surface fissures and subsurface irregularities in ferrous magnetic materials, said Frost.

Staff Sgt. Ken Russell, a 440th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron nondestructive inspection apprentice, calibrates an eddy current inspection instrument while undergoing seasoning training under the supervision of Tech. Sgt. Heather Clark, the 440th MXS NDI non-commissioned-officer-in-charge, at Pope Field, N.C., on July 23, 2014. Eddy current inspection is a nondestructive inspection technique for detecting fissures and subsurface irregularities in aircraft components made from non-porous metals, said Russell.

Staff Sgt. Ken Russell, a 440th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron nondestructive inspection apprentice, uses a black light to inspect an aircraft component for cracks during a liquid penetrant inspection at Pope Field, N.C., on July 24, 2014. Liquid penetrant inspections are used to identify surface discontinuities in non-porous metals not easily visible to the naked eye, said Russell.

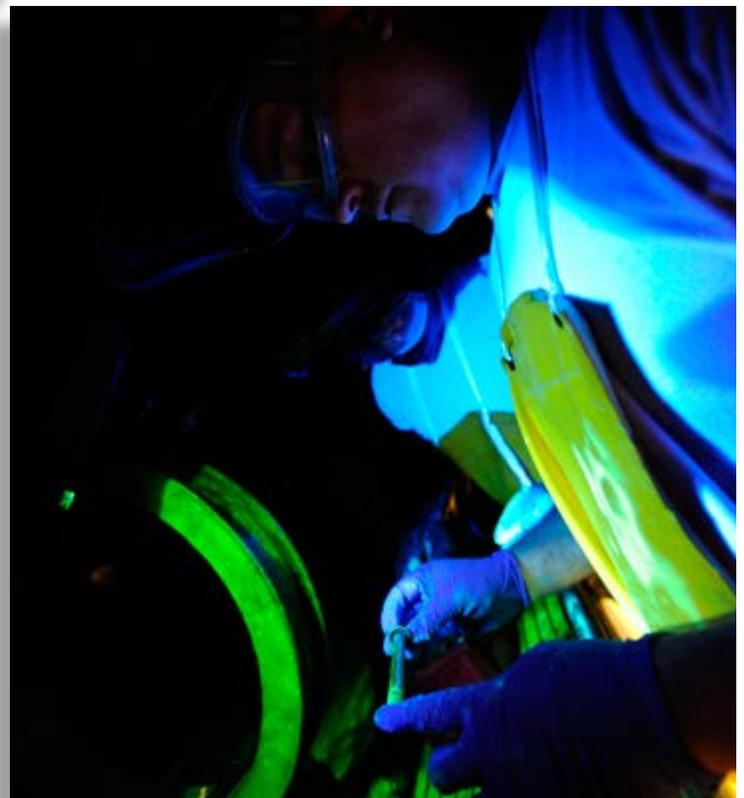

Staff Sgt. Joshua Campbell, 2nd Airlift Maintenance Squadron structural maintenance journeyman, sprays primer on aircraft components at Pope Field, N.C., on July 23, 2014. “It’s hot and sweaty in that suit,” said Campbell, “it’s the equivalent of wearing [chemical protective] gear while performing a job.”

Tech. Sgt. Richard Lee, the 2nd Aircraft Maintenance Squadron, structural maintenance non-commissioned-officer-in-charge, drills out a rivet hole while repairing a damaged C-130H door at Pope Field, N.C., on July 23, 2014. The Airmen of the 2nd Airlift Maintenance Squadron can design and fabricate aircraft parts out of sheet metal, tubing and metal ingots using CNC mills and lathes and hand tools, Lee said.

Staff Sgt. Ken Russell, a 440th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron nondestructive inspection apprentice, uses fluorescent magnetic particle bath to test a nose landing gear wheel bolt for cracks at Pope Field, N.C., on July 24, 2014. Suspended iron particles in the liquid are attracted to cracks in magnetized ferrous metals, which allows NDI inspectors to identify flaws not easily visible to the naked eye, said Russell.

Citizen Airmen Wanted: Nationwide Openings for Reserve Recruiters

Motivated recruiters are needed to help shape the future of the Air Force Reserve. The Recruit-the-Recruiter program is designed to identify Citizen Airmen, like yourself, who have what it takes to support the mission of the Air Force Reserve Recruiting Service.

“We are actively seeking qualified Citizen Airmen to apply due to projected vacancies throughout the Recruiting Service,” said CMSgt Jim Flamio, the Flight Chief of recruiting operations for the 440 Airlift Wing.

Flamio said there are many benefits to serving as a recruiter. While serving in Active-Guard-and-Reserve status, recruiters receive the same pay and entitlements as active-duty Airmen, including Tricare Prime and the opportunity to work toward an active-duty retirement. Also, many recruiters believe the best part of their job is helping applicants, who come to us from all branches of service and no prior service at all, obtain the opportunities that accompany service within the Air Force Reserve.

Those interested in becoming a recruiter or know someone who would like to talk about Air Force Reserve opportunities can contact CMSgt Jim Flamio at (910)263-9812 or james.flamio@us.af.mil. Applicants for recruiting duty must be open to relocate.
